DAVID, I'M SCARED! DON'T LEAVE ME ALONE!
OKAY, I'LL GO WITH YOU..

HE SAYS HE WAS IN AN ACCIDENT AND CAN'T REMEMBER HIS NAME..
A BLOW ON THE HEAD LIKE THAT COULD CAUSE AMNESIA...

A LOSS OF MEMORY?
YES, IT COULD BE TEMPORARY, OR FOR A LONG, LONG TIME..

I'VE JUST GONE THROUGH HIS POCKETS.. THERE'S NO IDENTIFICATION.. IN FACT, THERE'S NOTHING IN THEM!

THAT'S MY PICTURE!
RIGHT.. WE HOPE SOMEONE WILL COME IN AND TELL US WHO YOU ARE ...
I HOPE SO... IT'S TERRIBLE NOT BEING ABLE TO REMEMBER ANYTHING ABOUT YOURSELF... WHO YOU ARE ... WHERE YOU'RE FROM ...
I'M SURE WE'LL GET AN ANSWER .. YOU GET SOME REST.. I'LL BE BACK TOMORROW...
THIS IS THE HOSPITAL!
LET'S GO IN AND GET HIM!

THE NEXT DAY..
HE'S GONE!
WHERE DID HE GO?
THAT'S ODD! HIS CLOTHES ARE STILL HERE!
WE'VE SEARCHED THE HOSPITAL AND HE'S NOT ANYWHERE!
WE'D BETTER CALL THE POLICE!.
USE THE PHONE AT THE FRONT DESK!
I'D LIKE TO SEE THE YOUNG MAN WHOSE PICTURE IS IN THE PAPER..

TWINKLES AND WRINKLES

Rain

For more than a month there hadn't been even one drop of rain in that mid-western area. The northern farmers realized that their crops would actually be burned by the blazing sun. The southern ranchers watched their wells go dry. They would have to either sell their cattle at a loss or watch them die from thirst.

It was Hiram Spenfeld who originated the idea and spoke to some of his friends about it.

"We walk three miles out on foot to the old shrine. And then we pray for rain. All of us. Farmers, cattlemen, business men, and even professional men. Without water in a week, this area will be ruined."

The idea spread and the Continental News Service sent Bill Jacobs to take some pictures and interview some of the folks.

To his surprise thousands of people participated in the idea. It was a rough hot day. And he himself felt a bit tired when he reached the designated prayer spot. He took some pictures and then interviewed some of the people there. Then suddenly a question sort of popped right out of his mouth.

"You really believe that all this will help? That you will get rain?"

"I certainly do, young man," said an old timer. "We had a drought like this back in '35. Prayer helped."

"Then if you do feel you will have rain, why didn't you bring an umbrella with you?"

"All prepared," was the unexpected reply. "Got one of those folding umbrellas in my pocket. A gift from my grandson."

The Spy Picture

There are times when children can display an intelligence that is most remarkable. A child can analyze and explain a situation that completely baffles an adult. I got a dose of it the other evening. My little son and I were watching one of those complicated spy pictures on TV. It sure was full of excitement with a lot of shooting and chases. I enjoyed it. Only trouble being the sad fact I couldn't make head or tail out of it. But at the table we were having ice cream and cookies. My son explained it to me this way:

"Just like cops and robbers, pop. Only you have to know who are the cops and who are the robbers. Who are the good guys and who are the bad guys. Sure he is a secret agent for one side. He is also a secret agent for the other side. This way they only have to pay one guy to act that way. He is a double agent but he only gets a single salary. If they kill him then they knock off two at one time.

He knows who has the secret papers. But he has to take his time. Otherwise it would all be over very quickly. This way he can go to a lot of countries and see a lot of things. He puts it on his expense account. The way you do, pop. So what if he gets beat up? He must have a policy like we have. Gets free medical care. Right away I know who was the big spy. The only one you figure isn't the big spy has to be the big spy. He can't blow up the atomic plant. Otherwise we won't be alive to see the end of the picture. Simple, isn't it pop?"

What A Business!

Sam was born in a midwestern town. At the age of five he became an orphan. His education was limited to two years of high school. But he was a hard worker. First he sold papers. Then he opened a newsstand. And finally he controlled all the news stands and newspaper magazine deliveries in the city. He was well liked by everyone. Up to the age of 62 he had never left his home town. He had a physical examination.

"My feet always hurt me," he complained. "I am on my feet all day long. What should I do, doc?"

"You have never seen the seashore," smiled his physician. "I will tell you where to go for two weeks. Get two buckets of ocean salt water. Bathe your feet in them every day for twenty minutes. That should relax them."

So Sam flew to the famous southern ocean resort. After he got his room, he asked the bell boy to bring him two buckets. With these, one in each hand, he took the elevator to the beach level. Saw a lifeguard and spoke to him.

"How much for a bucket of that nice ocean water?" he asked.

The lifeguard controlled his laughter. But gave a reply.

"Two dollars each, mister."

Sam paid the bill. Took the water. Relaxed his feet in them. Felt fine. Next morning, early, he went down again. It was now low tide instead of the previous high tide. In amazement he looked at the "water that wasn't there." He saw the lifeguard.

"Boy, oh, boy," he exclaimed. "What Business! You must have sold thousands of buckets of that water!"
